Morion to Quash Subpoena Duces Torum

1	Court to quash the subpoena duces tecum served upon Movant by the District
2	Attorney.
3	The motion is made pursuant to non-statutory authority. The grounds
4	for the requested relief include the following:
5	1) the subpoena socks documents and records that must be sought
6	pursuant to the criminal discovery process, and not by means of a third party
7	subpoena duces tecum;
8	2) alternatively, the subpoena must be quashed because it fails to
9	satisfy the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure 1985 or otherwise to establish
10	with sufficient particularity that there is good cause for production of the
11	subpoenaed documents, and because it is overbroad and burdensome;
12	3) alternatively, enforcement of the subposna should be stayed until
13	those persons who may have a claim of privilege to raise with respect to the
14	documents have had an opportunity to review the documents and assert any
15	applicable privileges.
16	The motion is based on this notice, the following memorandum, the

The accompanying affidavit represents on "information and belief" that

Movant "has in their possession or under their control" documents which the affidavit identifies by a descriptive label or category. The affidavit references nine different types or categories of documents, some of which are for a specific date and others which are for a period of time, as follows:

- 1) Statement of Assets and Liabilities as of 12/31/99, 12/31/00, 12/31/01, 12/31/02 and through termination.
- Statement of Revenues and Liabilities as of 12/31/00, 12/31/01, 12/31/02 and through termination.
- 3) Balances for all Asset, Liability and Equity accounts as of 12/31/99, 12/31/00, 12/31/01, 12/31/02 and through termination.

- 8) Periodic statements reporting music publishing activity related to the Sony/ATV and MIJAC catalogs, including statements received from 12/31/99 through termination.
- 9) Reports or statements providing evidence of value for any music publishing catalogs, real estate or other real property, received from 12/31/99 through termination.

A cover letter transmitting the subpoena specifies that "[w]ithin 5 days of receipt," the custodian is to make a copy of "all records described in the [affidavit accompanying] the subpoena;" place the documents in an envelope (provided by the party issuing the subpoena), and place that envelope in a second envelope (provided by the party issuing the subpoena) that is addressed to the Court, and complete a declaration (sent with the subpoena). Exh A, p. 1; see Evidence Code section 1560. The declaration requires the individual signing the declaration to state that he or she is the custodian of the records and to complete the first section of the declaration, representing that: "true copies of all the records described" in the subpoena are enclosed in the envelope and that they are business records, or to complete the second section, entitled "No Records," and complete the following statement: "After a diligent search, I declare that this business has none of the following records: . . ." Exh A, p. 5; see Evidence Code section 1561.

The subpoena indicates the date for which the documents are subpoenaed is February 16, 2005, and that the type of hearing is "Jury Trial." Exh A, p. 2. The affidavit states the "documents are material to the proper presentation of this case by reason of the following facts: To prove motive on behalf of the defendant for the charged offenses and to corroborate the victims of the charges offenses." # A. S. Penal Code Section 1054 Establishes the Exclusive Means For Obtaining the Subject Records and Requires That the Subpoens Be Quashed

1. Introduction

The enactment of Penal Code (PC) section 1054, et seq. created for the first time a statutory scheme governing both the substance and procedure of criminal discovery between the prosecution and defense. People v. Superior Court (Barrett) (2000) 80 Cal. App.4th 1305, 1311, 96 Cal. Rptr.2d 264. "The procedural mechanisms of the statutory scheme (§ 1054, et soq.), are exclusive—that is, the parties to a criminal proceeding may not employ discovery procedures other than those authorized by Chapter 10." Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1312-13. citing, PC § 1054.5(a).1

The "meaning of 'discovery" for purposes of the statute, is made "clear . . . in its statement of purposes: 'To save court time by requiring that discovery be conducted informally between and among the parties before judicial enforcement is requested." People v. Sanchez (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1026 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 111, quoting, PC § 1054(b)(emphasis added by court). According to this definition, the discovery statute applies if the information sought is from the other party. The statute applies not only to the parties individually, but also to their agents and employees.<sup>2</sup>

¹ PC Section 1054.5(a) provides as follows: "No order requiring discovery shall be made in criminal cases except as provided in this chapter. This chapter shall be the only means by which the defendant may compel the disclosure or production of information from prosecuting attorneys, law enforcement agencies which investigated or prepared the case against the defendant, or any other persons or agencies which the prosecuting attorney or investigating agency may have employed to assist them in performing their duties."

To obtain information covered by the discovery provisions, a party is required first to make "an informal request of opposing counsel for the desired materials and information." PC § 1054.5(b). A party may not seek court enforcement to obtain the desired materials and information unless it has first made the required informal request. PC § 1054.5(b). Where a party has made the required informal request, and opposing counsel has not provided the desired materials and information within 15 days, the statute provides that "the party may seek a court order" for enforcement of its request. PC § 1054.5(b).

2. The Subpoena Seeks Records of the Defendant and May Not Be Obtained By Subpoena

The District Attorney's subpoens seeks documents and records of the defendant that the District Attorney asserts, based on information and belief, are in the custody of Movant. Because the items sought by the District Attorney are documents and records of the defendant, the District Attorney's subpoens is a request for discovery within the meaning of PC section 1054(b). Sanchez, 24 Cal. App.4th at 1026. The statutory discovery scheme thus provides the "exclusive" means for seeking the documents, and the District Attorney "may not employ relationship to the defendant or the criminal defense team.")

(although California Department of Corrections (CDC) is a distinct and separate government entity from the District Attorney, defense request for documents and records of CDC relating to investigation of prison murder for which defendant was being prosecuted are subject to discovery procedures and not subpoena, because CDC was investigating agency for District Attorney with respect to charged murder); Walters v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App.4th 1074, 95 Cal. Rptr.2d 880 (reciprocal discovery procedures apply to defense request to examine evidence in custody of police "because police are not third parties for these purposes and an examination of seized evidence is discovery, not 'investigation.''): People v. Superior Court (Broderick) (1991) 231 Cal. App.3d 584, 594, 282 Cal. Rptr. 418 (rejecting argument of defendant that proceeding to enforce criminal subpoena was premature on grounds that prosecution had failed to follow the procedures apply only to discovery between the People and the defendant" and "People claim that all of the subpoenas in issue here were to 'third parties with no direct formal or legal discovery procedures other than those authorized by Chapter 10" to obtain the documents. Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1312-13.

This means the District Attorney must seek the documents by compliance with the discovery process, which he has not done, and that he may not obtain the documents by the process he has employed, a third-party criminal subpoena duces tecum. Accordingly, the subpoens should be withdrawn, and if not, it should be quashed or declared invalid.

B. The Suppoena Must Be Quashed Because It Fails to Establish Good Cause, Is Overbroad and Burdensome, and Seeks Material That May Be Privileged

1. Introduction

Penal Code "Sections 1326 and 1327 set forth the procedure for either the prosecution or the defendant to obtain discovery records possessed by third parties." Barrett, 80 Cal. App. 4th at 1315. As the Court in Barrett confirmed, 'The issuance of a subpoena duces tecum . . . is purely a ministerial act and does not constitute legal process in the sense that it entitles the person on whose behalf it is issued to obtain access to the records described therein until a judicial determination has been made that the person is legally entitled to receive them." Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1316, quoting, People v. Blair (1979) 25 Cal.3d 640, 651, 159 Cal. Rptr. 818.

A criminal subpoena issued by prosecution must comply with Code of Civil Procedure (CCP) section 1985(b). People v. York (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 779, 789-792, 166 Cal. Rptr. 717; Johnson v. Superior Court for Santa Barbara County (1968) 258 Cal. App.2d 829, 837, 66 Cal.Rptr. 134; People v. Brinson (1961) 191 Cal. App.2d 253, 12 Cal. Rptr. 625; see also People v. Superior Court (Broderick) (1991) 231 Cal. App.3d 584, 587-88, 282 Cal. Rptr. 418 (assuming without discussion that subpoena duces tecum issued by prosecution is subject to CCP); but see, M.B. v.

Section 1985(b) requires that the subpoena be accompanied by affidavit showing good cause and materiality for production of the subpoenaed items.

Specifically, CCP section 1985(b) provides as follows:

A copy of an affidavit shall be served with a subpoena duces tecum issued before trial, showing good cause for the production of the matters and things described in the subpoena, specifying the exact matters or things desired to be produced, setting forth in full detail the materiality thereof to the issues involved in the case, and stating that the witness has the desired matters or

The court of appeal in M.B. v. Superior Court (2002) 103 Cal. App.4th 1384, 127 Cal. Rptr.2d 454, in upholding a subpoena duces tecum issued by a grand jury, ruled that the subpoena was not subject to CCP section 1985, and concluded, in dictum, that "the affidavit requirement [of CCP section 1985] does not apply to either criminal trials or criminal grand jury proceedings." Id., at 1394, 462. The court distinguished the cases holding CCP section 1985 applicable to a criminal trial subpoena on the ground that all but one had been decided before Pitchess, which it relied on as support for its conclusion, explaining that the Court in Pitchess ruled that the requirements of CCP section 1985 were not applicable to a subpoena issued by a criminal defendant for police officer personnel records. M.B., 103 Cal. App.4th at 1394, citing, Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal.3d 531, 113 Cal. Rptr. 897.

As explained by the court in Pacific Lighting Leasing Co. V. Superior Court (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 552, 131 Cal. Rptr. 559, the Court in Pitchess was discussing "the right of an accused to seek discovery in the course of preparing his defense to a criminal prosecution," which it noted was "a judicially created doctrine evolving in the absence of guiding legislation." Pacific Lighting, 60 Cal. 3d 561, quoting, Pitchess, 11 Cal.3d at 595-37. Moreover, the Court's holding that a defendant was not required to mest the specificity requirements of CCP section 1985 in order to establish good cause for enforcement of a subpoena for police officer personnel records was based on constitutional concerns specific to a defendant, and the decision was limited to "an accused in a criminal case . . ." Pacific Lighting, 60 Cal. 3d 562, quoting, Pitchess, 11 Cal.3d at 535-37 ("Were a court to require strict adherence to the provisions of CCP 1985 and 2036(a), it is likely that Fifth Amendment problems would develop in many instances. Therefore, in contrast to the formal requirements for civil discovery, an accused in a criminal prosecution may compel discovery by demonstrating that the requested information will facilitate the ascertainment of the facts and a fair trial." things in his or her possession or under his or her control.

Even if CCP 1985(b) were deemed not to govern a criminal subpoena duces tecum issued by the prosecution, the privacy and Fourth Amendment interests implicated by a third party subpoena duces tecum would still require that the subpoena comply "with the normal requirement that the party seeking discovery of documents furnish factual data by the required affidavit justifying disclosure."

Pacific Lighting, 60 Cal. 3d at 567, quoting, Johnson v. Superior Court, 258 Cal. App.2d at 837. Indeed, this is the standard a defendant must satisfy where the request does not implicate Fifth Amendment concerns. Pacific Lighting, 60 Cal. App.3d at 567 "The right to discovery by a subpoena duces tecum of third party records" requires a "showing the requested information will facilitate the ascertainment of the facts and a fair trial." Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1316, quoting, Pitchess, 11 Cal.3d at 536.

While the exact degree of factual specificity that is required to satisfy these requirements is, of course, subject to a case by case determination, "Ithe requirement of . . . good cause . . . is not met by an affidavit which is totally devoid of any statement of facts." Pacific Lighting, 60 Cal. App.3d at 567, quoting, Johnson, 258 Cal. App.2d at 835 (emphasis added). As the court in Barrett noted, "[a] subpoena duces tecum that makes a blanket demand for [third party] documents and amounts to nothing more than a fishing expedition is subject to being quashed." Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1320, n.7, citing, People v. Serrata (1976) 62 Cal. App.3d 9, 15, 133 Cal. Rptr. 144.

A third party served with a subposna duces tecum may also contest the subposna on the grounds that it is overbroad. M.B. v. Superior Court, 103 Cal. App.4th at 1387, n.4; Barrett, 80 Cal. App.4th at 1320, n.7 (in prosecution for prison murder occurring in 1996, court of appeal directed defendant and the District Attorney "to address whether the request for prison records dating back to January 1992 was overbroad" and after determining it was premature to consider overbreadth in the writ proceeding, added that "[t]he issue . . . is one that the trial court should consider if raised in further proceedings below.")

In addition to the objections to the subpoena that the third party has the right to assert, where the materials sought by the subpoena may be subject to a privilege held by another, the custodian has an obligation to take steps to preserve the opportunity to invoke that privilege. People v. Superior Court (Laff) (2001), 25. Cal.4th 703, 713, 107 Cal. Rptr.2d 323 ("[T]he custodian of materials protected by an evidentiary privilege owes a duty to the holder of the privilege to claim the privilege and to take actions necessary to ensure that the materials are not disclosed improperly." (citation omitted)).

The Subpoena Fails to Establish Good Cause, Is Overbroad and Burdensome, and Seeks Material That May Be Privileged

The affidavit here contains no specific facts and fails to establish good cause for production under either CCP section 1985 or the standards that are otherwise applicable by case law to a third party subpoena duces tocum.

In the words of the Court in Barrett, this subpoens is a "fishing expedition" and is subject to being quashed. There are simply no facts stated, as required by law, to establish good cause and/or materiality or relevance.

Separate and apart from the failure to establish good cause, the subpoena also must be quashed because it is overbroad. The subpoena does not even specify to whom or what the described records pertain and, as served, would apply to all of Movant's clients. As such, it infringes upon Movant's privacy and Fourth Amendment interests. It is also overbroad as to time, as it seeks documents "through termination." Because it is overbroad, it is also burdensome and oppressive as it would unreasonably require Movant to devote countless hours to attempt compliance with its overbroad scope.

Movant also objects to production and disclosure of the records in fulfillment

1	of its obligation to take steps to preserve the opportunity for others to invoke any
2	claims of privilege they may have with respect to the documents. People v. Superior
3	Court (Last), 25 Cal.4th at 713. Accordingly, even if the subpoena is not quashed,
4	Movant requests the Court order the production and disclosure of the documents be
5	stayed until claims of privilege can be invoked by any interested parties and
6	adjudicated by the Court at an in camera hearing.
