13 Plaintiff,

14 v.

15 MICHAEL JOE JACKSON,

16 Defendant.

No. 1133603

17 PLAINIFF'S MEMORANDUM
18 RE: AN APPROPRIATE LIMIT
19 TO CROSS-EXAMINATION OF 20 WITNESS CALLED BY THE 21 DEFENSE ON A LIMITED
22 ISSUE RELEVANT TO
23 SEARCH OF BRADLEY
24 MILLER'S OFFICE

25 UNDER SEAL

26 DATE: Sept. 16, 2004

27 TIME: 8:30 a.m.

28 DEPT: SM 2 (Melville)

21 Defendant has subpoenaed Jane Doe to appear in court and be questioned on 22 whether she knew Investigator Brad Miller was employed by attorney Mark Geragos and 23 whether she conveyed that information to law enforcement prior to November 18, 2003, the 24 date the search warrant of Mr. Miller's office was executed. It is anticipated that Jane Doe will 25 say she did not know who employed Brad Miller, nor did she care. She believed Brad Miller 26 was one of "Michael Jackson's people" along with a half-dozen others who were doing his 27 bidding. That is what she told sheriff's detectives in interviews conducted in July and August, 28 2003 and that is what she believes today.

1 Jane Doe had two lengthy interviews with detectives prior to the execution of the 2 Miller search warrant. The first began on July 6, 2003 and ended on the 7th. The second was 3 on August 13, 2003. Both interviews were video-taped. Transcripts have been prepared of the 4 interviews and are in the possession of the defense attorneys. The combined transcripts are 5 over 200 pages in length. Jane Doe said nothing about Brad Miller working for Mark Geragos.
6 On one occasion she refers to Brad Miller as one of "Michael's people," including him by that 7 reference with [REDACTED]
8 Once, when asked if she thought Miller worked for Jackson, she answered in the affirmative.
9 There are no other references to Brad Miller or to who might employ him.

10 Is there any evidence Jane Doe knew otherwise? An audio tape of Brad Miller's 11 interview with Jane Doe and family, presumably conducted on February 16, 2003, was seized
12 from Mr. Miller's office. That tape has been transcribed. At the outset of the interview, Miller 13 is heard telling Jane Doe he is a private investigator and works for the law firm of Geragos and 14 Geragos, specifically Mark Geragos, attorney for Michael Jackson. That introduction took 15 about 30 seconds. The interview lasted about 30 minutes. There were no other references to 16 Geragos. The interview concentrated on Michael Jackson and on Jane Doe's relationship with 17 her ex-husband.

18 Is it reasonable to believe that Mr. Miller's 30-second introduction of himself to 19 Jane Doe in which he referenced "Geragos and Geragos" would be so indelibly etched in Jane
20 Doe's memory that five to six months later she would understand Miller to have been employed 21 by Geragos rather than Michael Jackson himself? No; not in light of Miller's other remarks. In 22 the same 30 seconds introduction he also identified Michael Jackson as his ultimate employer,
23 and he devoted the balance of his conversation to the subject of Jackson and of Jane Doe's ex-24 husband.

25 The question of who employed Brad Miller would have been insignificant to Jane 26 Doe. She would have had no motivation to cause law enforcement to believe it was Jackson
27 rather than Geragos who was identified as Miller's employer. It would have made no
28 difference in her life at all. It is likely she either did not hear him utter the words, or did hear

1 him and, five to six months later, forgot it, or heard him but did not understand the significance
2 of what he was saying. At the time, and even today, she would have had no reason to 3 understand its significance.

4 District Attorney Tom Sneddon, Sergeant Steve Robel, Detective Paul Zelis and 5 others have all testified that prior to the execution of the search warrant they had no knowledge
6 that Bradley Miller was employed by Mark Geragos. All of the interviews they relied upon 7 were audio- or video-taped. There is no question as to what the witnesses said to the 8 investigating officers. None of the statements from any of the witnesses prior to the search 9 gave any information about Brad Miller's employer.

10 It is expected that defense attorneys will attempt to engage in intensive cross 11 examination of Jane Doe, covering all aspects of her life over the last ten years or beyond, in an 12 effort to show that she is lying about both issues; that in fact she knew of the Geragos/Miller
13 connection and that she conveyed that information to law enforcement. Defense attorneys 14 should not be allowed to aggressively cross-examine a witness on entirely collateral matters
15 under any circumstance. Defense counsel in this case should not be allowed to cross-examine 16 Jane Doe concerning other instances of behavior the defense contends reflects dishonesty
17 unless that behavior is relevant to the issue and only until they can make a good faith showing 18 that Jane Doe is being deceptive on the two issues at bench.

19 The court, observing that the issue of what Jane Doe knew and what she told the 20 investigators about who hired Bradley Miller could be resolved by her answer to two questions, 21 has already stated its willingness to resolve this issue with a declaration. The defense was 22 quick to state (with a glance at the press corps in the audience) that Jane Doe has lied under 23 oath numerous times in the past and her personal attendance, for the express purpose of 24 impeaching her anticipated testimony on this not terribly critical issue, was required for that 25 reason.

26 The defense revealed its motivation too quickly. They intend to use the 27 Geragos/Miller relationship as a pretext to go after Jane Doe in a very public way. Presumably 28 the defense expects to ask Jane Doe about, e.g., her deposition testimony [REDACTED]

1 [REDACTED] But "a party may not cross-examine a witness upon collateral matters
2 for the purpose of eliciting something to be contradicted. [Citations.]" (People v. Lavergne
3 (1971) 4 Cal.3d 735, 744. And see People v. Carpenter (1999) 21 Cal.4th 1016,1052: "Courts
4 may 'prevent criminal trials from degenerating into nitpicking wars of attrition over collateral
5 credibility issues.' [Citations to, inter alia, Lavergne.]"

6 The Court aptly identified the issue as "did she tell anybody in law enforcement, and 7 that's a simple question." (Uncertified RT 8/20/04 179:6-8.) It recognized that the defense 8 "would like to have her testify, but it doesn't seem to me that after she says yea or nay, that 9 there's much else to ask her[.] [A]s much as you would like to ask her everything else, that's 10 really the only issue here." (Id., 179:14-18.)

11 A good faith showing means more than Jane Doe knew of the relationship at one 12 time. It means she was consciously aware of the Geragos/Miller relationship at the time of the 13 interviews with detectives and intentionally withheld the information. That she may have 14 forgotten 30 seconds of apparently meaningless information told her five months earlier should 15 not be grounds for protracted cross examination that promises to be gratuitously nasty.
